GREEK TROOPS ARE REPORTED TO HAVE SUFFERED DEFEAT

Italian Forces Said to Have "Partly Destroyed" Disembarking Detachments

MUNITIONS, GUNS TAKEN

Different Version Is Given By London Military Quarters

By International News Service

ROME, Nov. 26.—Greek troops, which succeeded in landing on the Adriatic coast in the Epirus sector, suffered a severe defeat when Italian forces "partly destroyed" the disembarking detachments and captured the rest, the Fascist high command announced today.

All the Greek munitions and guns were taken when the remnants of the landing parties surrendered the announcement said.

Units of the Italian air force, it was stated, participated in the action along the rocky coast.

Editors Note—A different version of the coastal operations was given in London where British military quarters reported that the Greeks had successfully landed behind the Fascist lines and severed their communication.

High School Students To Hold Big Pep Meeting

A pep meeting and rally is to be staged in the Bristol Theatre tomorrow afternoon by the football team of the Bristol high school, in preparation for the big game with Morrisville on Thursday. This is the day that the annual local grid classic will be played.

The rally tomorrow afternoon will be attended by the high school band, cheer leaders, players, and the members of the faculty.

At one o'clock tomorrow afternoon the high school student body will meet at the high school and proceed to the theatre, where they will view the regular program at the theatre. At the end of the program, the band, cheer leaders, faculty and team will be admitted as guests of the theatre management.

Ned Egnal says that Frank Regan, the star of the University of Pennsylvania team, will be on hand, as will also Eugene Davis, quarter-back on the U. of P. team.

Two extra football short films will be shown.

After four o'clock the public will be admitted free to attend the big rally.

WEEK-END VISIT

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Houser, and Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Houser, Bath Road, spent Saturday and Sunday at Minersville and Pottsville.

ENJOY BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mr. and Mrs. John Wilno, 814 Wood street, gave a birthday party on Sunday for their daughter, Joan, who observed her seventh birthday. Those present were: James Flannigan, Patsy Di Lorenzo, Marylou Perkins, Maryann Ferraro, Diana Pacione, Yolanda Torana, and Margaret Woods. Prizes for games were awarded to James Flannigan and Yolanda Torana. A birthday cake was in the center of the table. Refreshments were served. The decorations were white and blue.

STATE TO AID DOCTORS IN FIGHT ON PNEUMONIA

Health Dep't Places Expanded Facilities at Disposal of Private Physicians

177 CONTROL STATIONS

By John Paset

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

HARRISBURG, Nov. 26.—(INS)—The State Health Department today placed the expanded facilities of 177 pneumonia control stations at the disposal of private physicians to combat the dread disease in Pennsylvania.

Dr. Dale C. Stahle, control division director, said health officials had estimated the cost of the program at approximately $120,000 annually. The division was established in April, 1939.

"We will be able to supply doctors with facilities made available by this department," Dr. Stahle explained, "in addition to laboratory work if they are unable to afford it."

"A patient on the State's relief rolls," he added, "is assured of just as good treatment as a millionaire in the best hospital."

"We anticipate more patients will be

Change Dates of Concerts To Jan. 7th and March 10th

A change has been made in the two remaining concerts sponsored by the Bristol Cooperative Concert Association.

The Don Cossack Chorus will appear in Bristol on Tuesday evening, January 7th; and Muriel Dickson, vocalist, will sing here on Monday evening, March 10th.

The change has been made due to holiday seasons of pupils at George School, Newtown, and St. Mary's Hall, Burlington, N. J., many of whom have concert tickets.

The Pocono Cooperative Association at Stroudsburg, has sent dates of its next two concerts to Bristol members, in case any should care to take advantage of the same, using their Bristol association tickets. On February 10th, Randolph Hokanson will appear in Stroudsburg; and on March 21st, Dorothy Crawford.

Greek Troops Land in Albania

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Greek troops have landed in Albania along the Adriatic coast and behind the Italian lines, British military quarters disclosed today.

The daring maneuver, it was stated, has resulted in the severance of Fascist lines of communication.

Caught unawares, the Italian army was reportedly trying to restore the situation, by rushing reinforcements to the coastal sector.

House Aroused Over Strikes

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—With Congress aroused over strikes in national defense industries, the House Judiciary Committee was called into a special, secret session today to consider the possibility of drafting far-reaching labor defense legislation.

At the same time another group of Democratic Congressmen, headed by Rep. Smith, Va., chairman of the House Labor Investigating Committee, was engaged in framing a bill to be introduced Thursday.

Legislative proposals include compulsory arbitration of labor disputes in defense industries and outlawing of compulsory unionization of temporary defense jobs such as ammunition construction.

Britain Does Not Approve of Armistice

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Great Britain is not prepared to agree to any Christmas armistice, Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today.

Asked whether the British Government would approach the Vatican or any other neutral state with a view to arranging a Christmas armistice, Churchill replied "no."

Great Britain To Ensure Integrity of Bulgaria

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Great Britain will do her best to ensure the integrity and independence of Bulgaria in any eventual peace settlement provided Sofia remains aloof from the Axis, the House of Commons was told today.

Foreign Undersecretary Richard A. Butler said that Bulgaria must not join with or assist actively or passively the enemies of Britain, nor may she attack Britain's allies if this pledge is to be fulfilled.

Refuse Change of Venue

MORRISTOWN, Nov. 26.—The judges of Montgomery County Court today refused the change of venue plea of William J. Earnest, Philadelphia short order cook who bludgeoned Mrs. Ethel Mae Atkins to death during a tussle in an unoccupied farmhouse at Horsham on Sept. 24.

He Took A Holiday

(By "The Stroller")

A well-known professional man observed last Thursday as Thanksgiving Day. His offices were closed and he and his family left town to be guests of a son.

A sign was placed on the office door which read:

"Celebrating President Roosevelt's Thanksgiving Day. Will be back at seven o'clock this evening."

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

The Westminster School of Church Music orchestra, from Princeton, N. J., will accompany the choir at Quaker town on Sunday, December 8th, when "The Messiah" is rendered. The orchestra is composed of 25 pieces.

"The Messiah" will be presented at three o'clock, December 8th, in the Quaker town high school auditorium, there being but one presentation this year.

In the past, the entire community and surrounding districts are well represented in the large choir that has been working hard in rehearsals under the direction of Robert W. Rudolph, Princeton, N. J. The choir feels confident that the lovers of music will appreciate the new numbers that will be rendered this year in addition to the more familiar ones.

Members of the choir are helping to make this annual musical feast a success by securing sponsors for the event. Sponsors' names will appear on the program, and they will also have a section in the auditorium reserved for them.

Plans are under way for the annual card party of the Lower Makefield P. T. A., which will be held in the auditorium of the Makefield School on December 4th. Harry Hoffman is in charge of the arrangements.

SOUTHAMPTON MAY CONSTRUCT SIDEWALKS

Subject is Given Consideration At Meeting of Chamber of Commerce

TALK ABOUT ZONING

SOUTHAMPTON, Nov. 26.—At a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce the question of sidewalks again was given consideration and this raised the question about curb lines and grades.

H. Russell Severns reported that no word had been received from the highway department on this matter. Jacob Weller, who was present in an advisory capacity, compared the virtues of cement and bituminous sidewalks. The elasticity of the latter he explained makes them very well adapted to conditions in Southampton. Costs would run from a minimum of 10 cents per square foot up, depending whether or not curbing was necessary. President Carlin appointed Harry L. Harding to serve with Monroe Fesmire and Guy R. Leedom on the sidewalks committee. An early meeting of this committee was arranged.

A report on the present status of the Zoning and Planning project was considered.

Monroe Fesmire and J. Lawrence Cushman spoke regarding Zoning and Planning. It was revealed that the petition as originally presented to the Road Board did not have a representation wholly satisfactory to them and had been returned for additional signatures. Mr. Cushman said that this matter would be remedied and the petition be presented again.

The next meeting of the organization will take place in December. The January meeting will be a dinner meeting, taking place of the banquet usually held in December.

10th Wedding Anniversary Is Observed By Rogers

The purchase of the Diehl property at Perkase for a post office site has been approved by the Procurement Division of the Federal government, it is announced. Confirmation came from Samuel P. Diehl, owner of the property, who has received word that formal agreements will be drafted and forwarded to Perkase at an early date.

The question of a new post office in that borough has been "hanging fire" for more than two years. The Diehl property is located at Chestnut street and Penn avenue, measuring 110 by 141 feet.

Over one year ago $75,000 was authorized for purchase of a site and construction of a post office building.

The Langhorne Junior Sorosis has voted to set aside funds for needed eye and dental work in the Langhorne-Middletown school district. This fund will be placed at the disposal of Mrs. George Mather, welfare worker and Miss Catucci, Langhorne school nurse. The Sorosis will attempt to maintain a balance of $25 for this needed work among children of school and pre-school ages. The money will be placed at the disposal of the welfare workers for use as they see fit.

As a means of supplying funds for their welfare project the Junior Sorosis will again hold their annual Christmas Dance in the Langhorne Country Club to which the public is invited to attend.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

Strikes and Defense

Washington, Nov. 25.

FROM Washington there goes out a constant stream of comment from journalistic reflectors of White House thought concerning the hesitation of the President to correct the weakness of the defense machinery by giving businessmen any more power to direct it than they now have.

WE are told that the present setup was largely planned by Mr. Harry Hopkins and Mr. Robert Jackson and that they, more than anyone else, are responsible for the creation of a Defense Commission without a head and without authority, except as obtained piecemeal from the President, who keeps in his own hands the power which manifestly should be delegated to someone less burdened with other things. The information is further vouchsafed that the all-absorbing question in New Deal circles these days is "how to treat these businessmen."

The clear intimation is that, in the opinion of the President's aides, they are not to be trusted and should be compelled to work under New Dealers of the type of Mr. Justice Douglas. When and how the President ultimately will decide this question is uncertain, but his disposition to give the commission a chairman with full power is not increased by the urging of a one-man board by such men as Senator Taft and Mr. Alfred Sloan, to say nothing of Mr. Willkie and the newspapers which were opposed to him in the recent campaign. Yet, even his friends concede that under the present setup the business of defense is proceeding at half speed and that full speed cannot be expected with authority, as at present, complexly dispersed between the Defense Commission, the Army, the Navy and other governmental branches.

IN the meantime, while the New

OTHER CASES HEARD

Four Trenton Men Sentenced For Stealing Gasoline From Penna. R. R. Yards

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 26.—William Franks, 42, Bristol, Negro, employed for 20 years by one firm in that Borough, pleaded guilty in Bucks County Criminal Court yesterday to driving while drunk in Bristol on October 26. He was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and costs and ordered to surrender his driver's license. Franks, arrested by Sergeant Ferry, of the Bristol police, had no accident. Judge Keller pronounced sentence. Ferry was the only witness.

Edward Epps Waples, 23, Negro, of Bristol, pleaded guilty to driving while drunk on Nov. 9, at Bristol. He was sentenced by Judge Keller to 15 days to one year in the Bucks County Prison. Waples said a man by the name of Booze—who was drinking—turned over his car for him to drive. The arrest was made by Linford J. Jones, chief of Bristol Police Department who was the only witness.

"So it was 'booze' that got you in trouble all around," District Attorney Edward G. Biester remarked.

The case of Commonwealth versus Thomas Gross, 21, Point Pleasant, was continued yesterday by Judge Keller.

Family of Four Taken Ill At Almost Same Time

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bolton and family, 336 Washington street, were stricken with potomania poisoning last night and today Mr. and Mrs. Bolton are still confined to their beds. The two children have recovered sufficiently to be about the house. Those who were taken ill, last night, after the evening meal, were Mr. and Mrs. Bolton, Marion Bolton, 19, and James Bolton, 17. Mr. Bolton is a letter carrier here in Bristol.

The four were taken ill almost at the same time, or within a short while of each other. The evening meal was eaten at about five o'clock and about two hours later the four became ill.

Today Mr. and Mrs. Bolton are still confined to their beds.

The family has no idea what caused the illness. A spokesman for the family said today that some chicken left from Sunday was eaten, but that no ill effects had been felt on Sunday when the same chicken was served. No canned food was eaten last evening. The family physician made two visits last evening and one this morning.

LAWTON OF EVERETT

John Edward Lawton, 21, single, of Everett, Mass., probably never expected to make Page One—to say nothing of a possible place in history books. John Edward Lawton is a plumber's helper by trade, but he has been out of work in recent months. Before he became a plumber's helper he was a sign painter's assistant, and he has worked at various odd jobs, besides holding a WPA position for a while last winter.

Lawton, the record shows, is a young American who has reached man's estate at a time when there aren't as many jobs as there are men—but who has worked manfully to make himself a useful, self-sustaining citizen.

Now John Edward Lawton has a man's size job—a job that means a lot to him and to his country, too. As pointed out, young Lawton of Everett probably never expected his name to attract the special attention of his countrymen, but it has. Several little tricks of fate—including the difference in time which gives New England a head-start on the rest of the country, and the fact that four comrades, ahead of him in line, failed to pass physical examinations—made Lawton the first young man inducted into the Army under the first peacetime conscription law in the history of the United States.

The Army captain who swore Lawton into the service reminded him of his distinction as the first new soldier to take the oath and added: "You've got a lot to live up to, and we're expecting a lot from you." Young Lawton accepted with becoming seriousness and modesty the role in which chance had cast him. He said that he expected to like his year in the Army and was determined to "build myself up." And then the former WPA worker added something which revealed his sense of responsibility and obligation as a citizen.

"The government helped me out when I needed it," he said, "and I'm only too glad to be of service to the government now."

It is evident that John Edward Lawton of Everett, Mass., is going to make a good soldier.

HURRY!

The old reasons for doing the Christmas shopping early are too well known to need repetition. It's unfair to already overworked clerks to wait until the last day to dash around to the stores for this and that and a dozen other things. It's being thoughtless of overworked postal employees to wait until two days before Christmas to mail Christmas packages. It's easier on your nerves and disposition generally to do your shopping before the last, hectic days.

In fact, these reasons are so well known and have been blazoned so repetitiously upon the pages of newspapers for years that they are now regarded as hackneyed stuff and no body pays any attention to them.

But there is a real reason this year to do your Christmas shopping as early as it still can be done, and it has nothing to do with sentiment or good fellowship. It is merely this: Christmas business, everywhere, is shaping up so far ahead of expectations that some lines are already threatening to become exhausted in some stores, and many others may momentarily in many stores.

The fact is, some people are going to do without the things they intended to buy because they waited too long. Don't be one of them.

NEWS BRIEFS FROM SUBURBAN TOWNS

HULMEVILLE

A several days trip to Tennessee and the Carolinas is being participated in by Mr. and Mrs. John G. England, who left here this morning for the South. Mrs. Amanda Palmer, Frankford, is paying a visit to her sister, Mrs. William Vansant, Bellevue avenue.

treated this season because of our expanded facilities," he asserted. Dr. Stahle pointed out that physicians would be able to requisition anti-pneumonia serums as well as the "equally efficacious" sulphathiazole and sulfaipyridine—two therapeutic agents developed in recent years.

The control stations are located in recognized hospitals and staffed with efficient personnel.

Although no special division existed in 1937, Dr. Stahle asserted, department facilities were made available to approximately 1200 patients. In 1938 the number jumped to 1600 while establishment of the division last year boosted the total to 9500.

Citing the rapid strides made by physicians in combating the infection—which medical circles term the "captain of the men of death"—Dr. Stahle said that more than 15,000 persons lost their lives in 1920 from pneumonia as compared with 4788 deaths last year.

"The mortality rate in treated cases is about 10 per cent," he emphasized, "while the death in untreated cases is above 30 per cent."

Cost of treating a patient who has contracted pneumonia is approximately four times less than two years ago, he added.

Dr. Stahle said that U. S. medical authorities had not requested the State to share an anti-pneumonia program.

"We will be glad to cooperate with them if they do, however," he said. Health officials warned that pneumonia is more frequent among males than females; that infection enters the lungs through the mouth and nose; and that lowered resistance through carelessness, excesses or illness allows pneumonia to gain the upper hand.

Dealers are worrying about how to treat "these businessmen," no one in the Administration seems worrying at all about how to treat "these labor leaders." Every week or so a strike breaks out in a new plant with a defense contract. The Vultee Aircraft deadlock in California, after some weeks' duration and rather maddening delay, is broken by an agreement on wages, but another deadlock is on because the strike leaders will not agree to a clause that they will not again strike in the two years during which the Government contract has to run.

AT New Kensington, Pa., a walk-out last week halted operations at the Aluminum Company of America's sheet mill, where work on aviation and defense orders has been proceeding. The chief point at issue here was the demand of union leaders that the company discharge a man who had failed to pay his back union dues. Failure of this man to pay his dues, it was said, was a "source of great irritation" to the dues-paying members. It was further alleged that the non-dues-paying member had "threatened" the union collector. On these grounds 700 men were called out and work vital to defense stopped. A strike at the Holcomb plant of the Crucible Steel Company, which also has defense contracts, has just ended.

IT is clear that precious time is being wasted over matters essentially trivial. One hesitates to make a suggestion, but it does seem that in such a crisis as now exists the President might be able to set up some kind of an arbitration board and secure agreement between industrialists and labor leaders to refer all disputes to it and abide by its decisions. It is not too much to ask labor to relinquish the right to strike against defense contracts during the crisis. It is not too much to ask industry to submit to the rulings of a board of arbitration such as Mr. Roosevelt would set up.

OR, if this plan is not feasible, then let the New Dealers originate a plan that is. The vital thing is

"TRIAL WITHOUT JURY"

By JAMES RONALD

CHAPTER THIRTY

The following morning, Michael Osborne shoved a suitcase into his battered old car and started off, his small savings in an inner pocket. His mother looked after him until he was far out of sight; then she went up to her room and remained there alone for a long time. When she came down, her eyes were sunk in hollows, but there was a smile on her lips. Someone had to smile, to keep up the family morale; and that someone had to be Edith.

A few days later, a reply came to a letter Edith had written to a cousin living a hundred miles away, who wrote that he had decided it was his duty to have the two youngest of "her unfortunate family" to stay with him for a month or so. Peter and Marjory left by train that afternoon, in a state of growing excitement at the prospect of a holiday away from what had become the hateful village of Lakelawn.

Edith suggested that sufficient funds might be spared to send Dorothy and Ann to some quiet resort for a few weeks, but her daughters refused to consider it.

"And leave you and Dad to fight it out alone?" cried Ann. "We wouldn't dream of it."

"Our place is with you, Mother," said Dorothy quietly.

"But I should feel happier if you were away from it all."

"Well, we shouldn't," retorted Ann, kissing her mother. "So that's that!"

No one ever knew what the ensuing week meant to Edith. Never before had she been separated from any of her children for so much as a single night.

And then a wire from her cousin plunged the depleted household into a state of nervous anxiety. It read: "CHILDREN MISSING THEIR BEDS. NOT OCCUPIED LAST NIGHT. HAVE CONSULTED POLICE. NO ACCIDENT REPORTED. DILIGENT SEARCH STARTED."

When the flurry created by the telegram was at its height, Peter and Marjory walked in, grimy and hungry, but in the best of spirits. The previous evening, when the rest of the cousin's household was asleep, they had packed their things and stealthily crept out of the house. A friendly truck driver, bound for Bradbury, had come out of his way to bring them home.

"We've never had such a terrible time before in all our lives," declared little Marjory. "I hate to say it about your relatives, Mother, but they were awful. They kept trying to make us tell them all about the murder."

"They would roll their eyes and say: 'Dear, dear, what a shocking calamity!'" added Peter, "but they loved hearing about it just the same. They kept talking about poor, poor Aunt Octavia."

"I told them you wanted us to forget about Aunt Octavia," said Marjory, "and they said you weren't bringing us up properly."

The following evening, when the family was at supper, Michael came home. He put his roadster in the shed, dumped his suitcase in the kitchen, slapped Hannah on the back, strode into the dining-room, and dropped casually into a chair.

"Hello, Mother," he said. "Hello, Dad!"

For a moment his swagger deserted him and he had rather a touching small-boy air.

"Gosh," he exclaimed, "it's good to be home again!"

Stephen held out his hand across the table.

"It's good to have you home again, son."

They shook hands solemnly; and then Michael grinned up at Hannah who was coming into the room with a laden tray.

"Hurry up, Hannah. I'm starving!"

That night he sat on the end of Ann's bed and talked for half an hour with hardly a pause for breath. On his second day away from home he found a job as helper in a garage. He had given his name as Jimmy Milligan and told the proprietor that he was an orphan. At first he had been fairly happy, although he had missed everyone at home like blazes—"even you, old Funny Face!"—and, Lord, what a relief it had been to be no one in particular once more! To walk down the street and not have the ghastly feeling that people were craning their necks to look at you! To be treated naturally, easily, like a normal human being, instead of a freak in a sideshow. Yes, there had been a lot of advantages to being Jimmy Milligan, orphaned garage hand.

But this morning a fellow drove in and, while I was under his car, I heard him talking with the boss about the Osborne Case. I kept telling myself that the Osborne Case was no concern of mine, that I was Jimmy Milligan and didn't care a hang what anyone said about it. But it didn't work. I was all ears. My face felt red. I couldn't help it.

"And then the fellow said: 'As a matter of fact, I understand the police are satisfied that Stephen Osborne did it, but they can't produce sufficient evidence to satisfy a jury, so they are delaying the arrest and hoping that fresh evidence will turn up.'"

"When I heard that I was all burned up. I slid out from under the car and stood up."

"I am Michael Osborne," I said, "and Stephen Osborne is my father. And you—you're a liar!"

"With that, I punched him on the nose."

Ann clapped her hands.

"Good for you, Mike! What did he do then?"

"For a second I thought he was going to hit me back; and he could have killed me with one punch. Gosh, he looked as big as a C. Cammeral! But I didn't care. I wanted him to hit me. I didn't care if he killed me."

"But he didn't. He stood looking at me for a while, rubbing his nose, and then said: 'You're all right, Sonny. I was just shootin' off my mouth. I'm sorry.'"

"That's all right," I said. And we shook hands.

"It was then I realized that I'd let the family down by running away and changing my name. I went across to the corner of the garage where my jalopy was standing, started her up—and headed for home."

With hands that trembled slightly, Stephen Osborne filled the blackened bowl of a favorite briar and fumbled for matches in the pockets of his shabby tweed jacket. He was frowning as he strolled down a winding path to his rose garden. He stood staring at the last blossoms of the season for some minutes, his forehead wrinkled, his teeth clamped tightly on the chewed mouthpiece of the pipe, his thoughts far away; and then from an inside pocket he drew a letter which he had in the morning post and read it for the third time. It was from a law firm in New York, and was headed:

Re: Miss Octavia Osborne's Trust. Dear Sir—

As we informed you in our letter of August 30th, of which we have not yet received an acknowledgment, you and your five children are the residuary legatees under a will made by your sister in May, 1924; which is, to the best of our knowledge, Miss Osborne's last will and testament. Under the terms of the will the entire estate, with the exception of a few minor bequests, is to be held in trust on your behalf during your lifetime and you are to receive the income from it. After your death the capital is to be divided equally among your children, on their attaining 25 years of age. While we are not yet in a position to provide you with an exact statement, it is probable that the residue will be in the region of eight hundred thousand dollars.

We regret that there is little likelihood of the estate being settled in the near future, since

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

Well, well, well. That ladies and gentlemen, is just a slight sample of what happens when Myrna Loy, the "perfect wife," meets Melvyn Douglas, the man who made Garbo laugh. They're a couple of firecrackers. A word from one just seems to light the fuse of the other. They're teamed for the first time in the mad marital mix-up, "Third Finger, Left Hand," opening today at the Grand Theatre.

Myrna appears as a fashion magazine editor who invents a husband in order to protect her job. Melvyn is a landscape painter who falls for Myrna and then, when he discovers that her husband is a myth, turns up at her home and pretends to be the husband. Then the fur begins to fly. And if you laughed at "I Love You Again" you'll roar at "Third Finger, Left Hand."

BRISTOL THEATRE

Filmed against the spectacular backdrop that is Monument Valley in Kayenta, Arizona, 180 miles from the nearest railroad station, "Kit Carson" will have its first showing at the Bristol Theatre today. Directed by George B. Seitz, the stellar cast of "Kit Carson" includes Jon Hall, Lynn Bari, Dana Andrews, Ward Bond and Harold Huber.

Its action-filled story unfolds some of the spectacular episodes in the life of the great American adventurer who joined forces with John C. Fremont to survey and map the shortest overland route to California.

RITZ THEATRE

"Brigham Young," by Louis Bromfield, was produced on a magnificent scale by Darryl F. Zanuck. The picture, which opened at the Ritz Theatre, is spectacular and grippingly dramatic. It has an exceptional cast starring Tyrone Power with Linda Darnell in the leading feminine role and Deau Jagger portraying Brigham Young.

With the great Mormon migration as its theme, the film gets off to a tremendous start. The massacre at Nauvoo, Ill., and the heroic trek westward are depicted with thrilling realism. "The Golden Fleece" is also being shown.

To Extend Safety Drive In Industrial Plants

on the program. Morning and afternoon sessions will be held in the Forum of the Education Building. Lewis G. Hines, Secretary of Labor and Industry, will preside at a dinner meeting concluding the conference, says Mr. McIlvaine.

Another phase of the safety drive is an expansion of the State-wide Industrial Safety Contest sponsored annually by the Bureau of Inspection. In cooperation with the Federal Department of Labor, the Bureau assembled this year more than 12,000 individual plant accident reports and issued several thousand safety certificates to plants which went through 1939 with no accidents at all, or with accident records better than the state averages for their classifications. Under this plan Pennsylvania is the first state to ascertain definitely its industrial accident trends. The information obtained will be used to assist employers and employees in solving their own accident problems.

A safety poster issued by the Bureau sounds a patriotic note in its display of the National Emblem floating on a flag

DON'T BURN UP FUEL MONEY—

Burn Koppers Coke

When you burn Koppers Coke in your furnace, your fuel money doesn't go up the chimney or into the ash pit. For this scientific fuel is almost all heat-producing! Its high carbon content makes it the most efficient solid fuel on the market. And here are the reasons—Koppers Coke leaves fewer ashes—saves you many hours of drudgery throughout the winter. It's the economical fuel for people who want to keep their homes comfortably warm with less work.
